REPORT ON THE GENERAL ELECTION HELD 31st MAY, 1919.

Chief Electoral Office,
Hobart, 29th October, 1919.

SIR,

In accordance with your instructions, we have the honour to submit a report upon the General Election held on the 31st May, 1919.

The election was conducted under the provisions of "The Electoral Act, 1907," and amendments thereof, and the regulations made thereunder.

From an administrative point of view, the conduct of the election was satisfactory, and the returning officers are to be commended for the efficient manner in which they discharged their duties in their respective electorates.

We are also indebted to the Acting Statistician and his officers for the valuable assistance rendered in connection with the compilation of the accompanying statistical tables illustrating in detail the various results secured in this and previous elections.

As the proposed amendments, and the general working of the electoral system now in operation, have been so exhaustively dealt with in previous reports, it is deemed unnecessary to again comment upon them here, but to confine this report to a practical review of the results of the General Election of 31st May, 1919, compared with previous elections held under the same system.

In 1919 there were on the roll 107,541 electors, as compared with 107,321 in 1916, and 103,513 in 1913. The increase, however, has not been proportionate in each district, for Denison shows an increase of 1588 in enrolment, and Franklin of 409; whilst there has been a falling off in Bass of 585, in Wilmot of 367, and in Darwin of 821 since 1916.

The relative growth of population in various districts is subject to constant changes, and consequently it becomes gradually more difficult to maintain proportional representation under the "District Quota" system. The adoption of the "Uniform Quota" system, or the periodical adjustment of district boundaries, is necessary if the idea of proportional representation is to be effectively carried out.

Of the total numbers on the roll, 66.08 per cent. voted in 1919, 73.60 per cent. in 1916, and 66.36 per cent. in 1913, respectively.

The estimated adult population in December last numbered 106,539, or 0.94 per cent. less than the total enrolment on 31st May, 1919. This difference may be due mainly to the numbers of Australian Imperial Forces which returned to Tasmania from January to April.

As a method of securing equitable Parliamentary representation, the Hare-Clark system of election is being considered by the New South Wales Government. Their representative, Mr. Scott, was present here during the election in May last to obtain a practical illustration of the working of the system, and to report thereon to his Government. Mr. Scott commented favourably thereon.

The delay in the return of the ballot-papers from King Island, District of Darwin, caused by the shipping strike, rendered it necessary to extend the date for the return of the writ for that district.

I would again urge that consideration be given to the recommendation made in the 1916 report, in which it was suggested that the administration of the Electoral Acts be removed from Ministerial control. Returning officers at the recent conference were unanimous in the opinion, in view of the conflicting political interests inseparably associated with the conduct of elections that such a step would prove of advantage in the administration of the Act.

Following upon the results of this election, a conference of returning officers was convened, and the decisions will form the subject of a separate report, relating to suggested amendments to existing legislation, which, if accepted, will facilitate the conduct of future elections. The amendments referred to are mainly in the direction of bringing the Federal and State Acts into line, which obviously will result in more efficient administration particularly as regards joint enrolment.

The following summarised particulars in tabular form deal with the various phases of this and previous elections.

TABLE I. shows the Number of Electors on the Rolls and the Number of Valid Votes Recorded on 31st May, 1919.

TABLE II. gives a brief Synopsis of the Number of Electors on Rolls, the Number who Voted, the Number of Informal Votes, and other particulars relating to the General Election in 1919, together with corresponding figures for Three previous General Elections.

It is obvious from the preceding table that had the election been determined by a "uniform quota" applied to the State as a whole, instead of by a separate quota for each of Five Districts, the leading party would be entitled to One more representative.

TABLE VI.—The following tabular illustration shows to what extent the initial composite first-choice votes recorded in favour of contesting parties become modified by the combined influence of (1) loss due to exhaust transfer choice (barrage), and (2) to gain or loss due to cross voting in the process of choice transfers (alloyage), before the real effective strength of parties can be truly ascertained, and by which the due proportional share of representatives can alone be determined.
